Utah State Auditor's Review Finds No Evidence of Misuse or Mismanagement of Public Funds by Vineyard City.

Vineyard City has issued the following statement outlining proactive measures regarding a recent report issued by the State Auditor:

Earlier today, the Utah State Auditor released a report following a limited review of Vineyard City and its Redevelopment Agency (RDA) regarding financial reporting, tax increment practices, and internal policies over a seven-year period. The review found no evidence of misuse or mismanagement of public funds. The review found no evidence of misuse or mismanagement of public funds. Instead, the Auditor highlighted technical compliance items and transparency opportunities, many of which Vineyard had already implemented prior to the conclusion of the review. The City appreciates the Auditor's oversight and considers the findings a constructive opportunity to enhance already-strong systems of fiscal stewardship and public engagement.

"Vineyard City works diligently to ensure transparency, accountability, and integrity in every aspect of our financial operations," said Vineyard City Mayor Julie Fullmer. "We are pleased that the State Auditor's review found no evidence of misuse or mismanagement of public funds. We agree with the helpful Auditor's recommendations, have already implemented them, and view them as a valuable opportunity to further strengthen our systems of transparency and public engagement."
